The Daily Courant.

Monday, July 24. 1721.

London, July 24.

On Saturday arrived a Mail from Holland, and another from France, and Yesterday one from Flanders.

Algiers, June 6.

ON the 29th of the last Month, one of our Corsairs brought in hither a Dutch Prize, a Pink, called the young John Adrianss, Lawrence Bommer Master; that Vessel having sailed from Amsterdam on her Voyage towards France, was taken off of Ushant; her Cargo consisted of 1936 Crusadoes, 3 Tuns of Whale-Oyl, 1 Barril of Nutmegs, 1 Bale of Coffee, 6 Barrils of Copper, and some Campeachy Wood: The Master and all the Crew were made Slaves, and were immediately exposed to Sale to the highest Bidder. The Captain of another Prize, which was brought into this Port some Days before, having reported that a Squadron of Dutch Ships was at Cadiz, and would shortly come hither to bombard this City, conjointly with the Assistance of some Spanish Men of War, Lawrence Bommer was immediately called before the Bey, who enquired of him, if what the other Captain said was true? but upon his answering, that he could not tell, he was forced by the Bastinado to confess it afterwards: That News has filled this City with the utmost Consternation; most Part of the Inhabitants have already sent their Families and best of their Effects to the Mountains and Gardens, for Fear of the Bombardment, and have put into the City-Magazines the rest of the Goods, that cannot easily be conveyed to a greater Distance. Orders are likewise given to cover those Magazines with Wooll-Packs so soon as the Enemy's Fleet is descried: Nevertheless 'tis the general Opinion here, that upon the appearing of that Squadron, the Algerines will make no Difficulty in concluding a Peace with the Dutch and their Allies. On the 30th of May last, one of those Corsairs sent in another Dutch Prize, a Galliot, called the Fortune, laden with Wine, Brandy, and Salt, and bound for Amsterdam; but the Crew had the good Fortune to escape on Shore. The same Corsair sunk a Biscay Bark, after having taken the Crew, consisting of eight Men, who are brought hither; and likewise an English Vessel, laden with Wine and Brandy, and homeward-bound, upon Pretence she was not provided with a good Passport: The Captain and one Sailor belonging to that Crew have been already sent hither, the rest of the Crew, consisting of 12 Men, were also ordered hither in a Vessel with 12 Turks, but it being a Month since, and they not being arrived yet, 'tis concluded they have been re-taken at Sea. On the 3d Instant arrived here a Corsair Ship of 34 Guns, commanded by a Portugueze Renegado, who reports, that he had a bloody Engagement with a Dutch Pink off of the Spanish Coast; that he had 50 of his Men killed and wounded in the Action; that he lost his Main-Mast, and if he had not taken the Advantage in getting away by favour of the Night, he should have infallibly been sunk. The Algerines have received melancholly Advices concerning the taking two of their Corsairs, viz. one of 40 Guns, by some Maltese Ships of War, and another of 20 Guns, but by what Enemy is not yet known. There are but few Algerine Corsairs at this Time at Sea; and those are daily expected to return into Port.

Berlin, July 19. On the 14th Instant the King of Prussia returned hither from his Progress into Prussia. On the 16th the Lord Whitworth, the British Minister, had Audience of his Majesty; and on the 17th set out for the Hague. M. Westphale, the late Danish Envoy at Petersbourg, having received Orders from his Court to go to Dresden, to notify the Queen's Coronation, set out from hence some Days ago, and is expected here very soon in his Way back to Copenhagen.

Copenhagen, July 19. On the 15th Instant the King declared Count Reventklau Great Chamberlain. The Queen of Denmark made her publick Entry the next Day into this City from Fredericksberg, all the Burghers being under Arms. The Procession was begun by all the Counsellours of Justice and those of State on Horseback; these were followed by 36 Coaches of the Nobility, each drawn by six Horses. The Queen's Coach was drawn by eight Horses, and in it sat the young Princess with her Majesty. The King, who had come to Town incognito, received the Queen at the Palace. There was a very Magnificent Entertainment at Court, above 60 Persons dined with the King, and the rest at the Marshal's Table. The King supped that Evening with the Queen at her House near the Palace, and went back to Fredericksberg the same Night. The Court went this Morning to Fredericksburg, where they intend to stay some Days; and afterwards 'tis said the King will go to Holstein.

Hambourg, July 22. The Duke of Mecklenbourg Swerin has lately caused a Person of Distinction at Domitz to be beheaded, who is supposed to be his Secretary M. Starke. Three of that Duke's Ministers are arrived here, and himself is expected here very shortly. Letters of the 16th Instant from Stockholm destroy the Report of the present King of Sweden's Death: It is true that his Majesty had a Relapse of his Ague at Carelsbad, but the Waters at Medwig have benefited him very much, and it is hoped he will be perfectly recovered in a very little time. Those Letters add, that the Preliminaries of Peace are certainly agreed upon between the Swedish and Russian Plenipotentiaries; but that there are secret Articles which remain yet undetermined, and that some of those concern the Marriage between the Czar's Daughter and Prince George of Hesse-Cassel. It was generally reported at Stockholm, that a Minister from Denmark was expected there, to treat of an Alliance between the two Crowns. The Arrival of the Czar at Petersbourg is confirmed, but the Czarina and Duke of Holstein are not yet arrived there. That Duke's Affairs, with respect to his Marriage, continue on the same uncertain Foot they have been upon hitherto: It is said however, that M. Stambke will reside at Petersbourg till another Minister is appointed in his Room. It is assured, that the Duke had some time ago actually determined to return from Riga to Germany, but was perswaded by the Czar to accompany him in his Visits to his Sea-Ports.

Paris, July 30. Letters from Madrid of the 15th say, that the King has confer'd the Dignity of Grandee of Spain upon the Duke of St. Michel, for him and his Discendants; and that the Marquess de Malgon, who was likewise a Grandee of Spain, died on the 13th Instant, aged 39 Years: That Advices were arrived there that the two Gallies, the St. Philip and our Lady of Solitude, appointed to convoy the Ships which are to receive Troops on board for relieving the Garrison of Ceuta and other Places in Africa, were safely arrived at Cartagena. On the 25th Instant the Archbishop of Cambray received the News by an extraordinary Courier dispatched by Cardinal de Rohan, of his Promotion to the Cardinalship, which News he carried to the Duke of Orleans, who immediately informed the King of it. The new Cardinal, soon after, paid a Visit to the Duke of Bourbon and to the Mareschal de Villeroy, from whence he went to St. Clou, to acquaint her Royal Highness the Dutchess of Orleans of his Accession to that high Dignity; he afterwards visited the Cardinal de Noailles, and likewise imparted the News of his Promotion to all the Cardinals and Prelates who are at present in this City: The next Day, the Cardinal de Noailles returned his new Eminency's Visit, which Ceremonial is likewise observed by the other Cardinals and Prelates. The

Bleedings

Bleedings and other Means uſed to recover the Duke d'Aumont, have conſiderably relieved him, and 'tis hoped he will ſhortly recover his Health, having already recovered the uſe of his Speech. On the 28th Inſtant, the Turkiſh Ambaſſadour ſet out to Chantilly, where the Duke of Bourbon cauſed him to be magnificently entertained: It is aſſured that that Ambaſſadour will leave this City on the 2d of the next Month in Order to return Home; and that the Mareſchal de Villeroy will conduct him to Villeroy, whence he will go to Fontainebleau, and afterwards proceed on his Journey to the Port where he is to embark. The Dutcheſs of Vantadour finds that the Air of the Abbey of Joarre agrees well with her; ſhe has compoſed the Differences among the Nuns of that Abbey, who had been at Variance ſince the Deceaſe of the late Abbeſs.

Whereas an Engine to raiſe Water by Fire, commonly called Savery's Engine, requires double the Quantity of Fuel that it ought to do, and beſides is liable to burſt or break in the uſing: This is to certify the Publick, that a Remedy is found for both theſe Faults, and a Scheme for the ſame has been laid before Perſons of Eminence as well as Skill, who have ſo far approved it as to ſign a Certificate, that they are of Opinion it will fully anſwer the Author's Deſign for the publick good: Yet the ſaid Certificate being produc'd before the Patentees of this Engine, they have wholly ſlighted the ſame, and demand that the whole Scheme be laid open without Reſerve before Mathematicians (or rather Workmen) of their own, and of far inferiour Note to thoſe who had judged of it before, and that the Author rely wholly upon the Event, and upon their Generoſity for his Reward. Now this will appear an Hazard both to himſelf and the Publick, theſe Patentees having no Fund for Tryals, nor for aſſigning a Reward, and beſides having lett Leaſes of their Engine for many Years, are wholly regardleſs whether the ſame be improved or not. This is therefore to invite thoſe who have purchaſed ſuch Leaſes, or are Proprietors of ſuch Mines where this Engine is or may be uſeful, to meet at St. Paul's Coffee-houſe, on Tueſdays and Fridays, between the Hours of four and ſeven in the Evening, where they will be informed more fully of theſe Matters, and of ſome others it may concern them to know.
